WASHINGTON — One of the busiest outfits in Washington today is the National Bituminous Coal Commission, which is at last getting ready to announce the prices at which coal may be sold in the United States.

Bailey Approves Assuming Debt of New Road District

Governor Signs House Bill 596 and Senate Bill 438

BOTH UNDER FIRE But Governor Denies Either Bill Violates the State's Credit

LITTLE ROCK—Road improvement districts formed to build roads off the state highway system, and Little Rock's Main Street Bridge District—all barred from state aid under the funding Act of 1934—were assured such aid during the 1933-41 biennium when Governor Bailey signed House Bill No. 596 and Senate Bill No. 438 Wednesday.

House Bill No. 596, by Representative B. Frank Williams of Mississippi county, appropriates $280,000 for payment during the biennium beginning next July 1 of maturities of principal and interest on bonds issued since February 4, 1927, "to build farm to market roads, or roads in farm communities."

Senate Bill No. 438, by Senators Ed B. Dillon and Ellis M. Pagan of Little Rock, appropriates $44,820 for payment of principal and interest of bonds issued by bridge improvement districts in the state, exclusive of districts which constructed oil bridges.

The Rowell bridge district bill, which became Act 104 of 1933, appropriated $295,945 for payment of principal and interest of bridge improvement districts formed to construct bridges on the highway system.

Both Bills Criticized
Little Rock's Main street bridge, not a part of the state highway system, was excluded from benefits under the Rowell bill and their bill.

Both bills provided that their bill be provided for relief of the Main street Bridge District. The difference in appropriation of the two bills to $148,875, the approximate total of principal and interest due on Main street bridge bonds during the next biennium.

Both bills provide that funds for payment of the obligations may be taken from certain accounts created under provisions of Refunding Act of 1934 and by that act declared to be trust funds for payment of certain obligations specified in the act. Both bills were criticized as violating the refunding agreement.

Opponents of the Williams road district relief bills charged in the house and the senate that it contained some of the provisions of proposed Amendment No. 28, which was rejected overwhelmingly at the 1938 general election.

Violation Denied
Although sponsors denied it provided for any of the Park Hill, Sylvan Hills and Lakewood districts north of Little Rock, former by Justin Matthews and his associates, many persons believe these districts, since they are several miles outside of any city or incorporated town and since some of them are receiving turnback aid, will qualify for relief under the bill. Mr. Williams and Senator Ivy W. Crawford of Blytheville said the bill would benefit only districts in Mississippi, Crittenden, Saline and Jefferson counties and that the total of bonds of such districts was not more than $1,350,000.

Governor Bailey issued a statement after he signed the measures saying neither of them violated Refunding Act 11.

"They do not violate our contract with our creditors. They do give needed relief to taxpayers," he said. "Neither of these measures pretends to assume the indebtedness of the bridge districts or the road improvement districts as indebtedness of the state."

"They do set a precedent for future General Assemblies to accord relief. The precedent, however, is that relief will be accorded only if needed and if it can be accorded without doing violence to our contract with our creditors or to the cash position of the highway maintenance funds."

A glimpse at the Commission's activities gives a perfect picture of what government price-fixing on a large scale is like.

It is a task of bewildering complexity. It is about to provide the railroads with a brand-new headache.

It has a considerable section of the coal operators up in the air. It has injected a note of uncertainty into the coal wage negotiations—and a movement to abolish the whole price-fixing set-up is rapidly getting up steam.

Maze of Statistics
First for the complexity. The general idea back of the coal mines in the country, this means a whole has been spending more money to get coal to the market than it has been getting in sales. The Coal Commission figures that the industry has been losing about 12 cents a ton. So it's up to the commission to set prices which will enable the industry to operate in the black.

The first step is to find out precisely what the costs are. So the commission sent to every known coal producer in the United States a questionnaire asking how much his costs came to in the base year, 1936. Since there are slightly fewer than 11,000 coal mines in the country, this means a lot of figures; so the country is divided into 22 districts, each district having a statistical bureau which collects the figures for its own areas and works up the proper totals.

These totals must be weighed to allow for changing costs since 1936. Public hearings must be held, basic prices for each district must be set up, and these must then be co-ordinated by the commission so that fair competition in each market area may be assured.

That is easily said—but infinitely complex in the doing. Consider, for instance, the unending series of variation between my mine and yours. My mine may be able to produce coal at $1.50 a ton, and your mine may have a cost of $1.80. But the quality of my coal may be slightly lower than that of yours, so that to complete with you I have to shade my price somewhat. Then, perhaps, you may be able to reach a certain market by barge while I have to get there by railroad.

Furthermore, in the month of January I may produce a considerable quantity of coal for which there is almost no market in January, although there will be a good market for it in July—and I can't afford to store it. Laying a large or more of different sorts of coals or more of different grades of coals is another matter. The fact that no two yields of coal anywhere are precisely alike—and multiply them by 10,000-odd, and you get a fair lead of the complexity of the commission's task.

Producers' Reaction
It is so complex, indeed, that complaints are already being heard that the job is simply impossible. Some 37 major coal producers have formed the Committee for the Amendment of the Coal Act, which has opened offices in Washington and started a campaign.

The committee's stand is that the Coal Commission is trying to function under a law that is absolutely unworkable; it wants the law amended so as to discard the price-fixing section and substitute some sort of plan for voluntary marketing agencies. The chances are that a bill embodying those features will be introduced in Congress within a fortnight.

Meanwhile, the commission goes ahead with its job. It is now in the last stages of holding hearings on the cost schedules for the different districts. After that, it must co-ordinate these schedules in respect to the different market areas and hold final hearings. Then it can go ahead and promulgate its prices. Final hearings will probably be about March 15. It may be from one to six months after that before the prices are put into effect.

Which may delay the coal wage negotiations now in progress. Obviously, what the operators can pay the miners depends to a large extent on the minimum price they can expect to get for their coal. How far they will go in signing a wage contract before they know what that minimum will be is an open question.

The railroads are beginning to realize that some bad news is coming their way. Some rise in prices is practically certain; since the commission figures that there is an average loss of 12 cents a ton on coal, a boost of at least that much is generally expected. The railroads bought 900,000 tons of coal last year—22 per cent of the coal mined in the country, incidentally—and in their distressed condition the prospect of a rise of $1,000,000 or more in their coal bill does not appeal to them at all.

155 Domestic, 37 Foreign Corporations Are Also Dissolved

LITTLE ROCK — (AP) — Governor Carl Bailey Thursday by proclamation dissolved Dyess Colony, Inc., an Arkansas domestic corporation controlling the 2-million-dollar rehabilitation colony of that name in eastern Arkansas.

The corporation was one of 155 domestic and 37 foreign corporations dissolved by the governor for failure to make reports to the Arkansas Corporation Commission and failure to pay annual franchise taxes for a period of three years.

The governor's action came a week after his leaders had been defeated by a senate filibuster in an attempt to have the legislature pass a bill providing for an investigation of the colony.

The chief of operations is appointed for four years, and has the rank of full admiral while in the post. Precedent was set aside in the selection of Capt. John Henry Towers, who fellow officers call "the navy's No. 1 aviator," as chief of the Bureau

WPA May Be Cut in Half in Year

Administrator Harrington Sees It Eventually Liquidated

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Col. F. C. Harrington, administrator, told a house appropriations subcommittee Thursday that the WPA rolls probably could be cut in half by July 1, 1940.

Harrington appeared at secret hearings on legislation to give the WPA the additional $150 million dollars requested by President Roosevelt for operations through June 30 this year.

The administrator, committee members said, also declared he did not consider the huge relief agency permanent; but thought it could be liquidated eventually.

MIND Your MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. It is your duty to invite a person to speak before your club, should you write the speaker a note afterwards saying how much the members enjoyed hearing him?

2. Should the members of an organization pay attention to the speaker—even though he bores them?

3. It is gracious for the members to tell the speaker afterwards that they enjoyed hearing him?

4. Should a speaker be careful not to run over the time allotted him?

5. Is it the duty of a speaker to give time and thought to his talk—rather than standing up and rambling on about nothing?

What would you do if—
You are asked to speak to a large group, and you have had no experience in speaking and feel you could not make a good talk. Would you—
(a) Accept the invitation, but say that you don't think you will be very good?
(b) Try?
(c) Get some experienced talking to a small audience before tackling a large one?

Answers
1. Yes. They invited him.
2. Yes.
3. Yes.
4. Yes.
5. Yes. Every member should have something to say, as well as being able to say it.

Mussolini Mum, and Silence Has Whole of Europe Buzzing

Some of British Think Break Near With Herr Hitler

Hitler Said to Be Unwilling to Back Italian African Plan

U. S. ALSO FACTOR

Arms Program of Democracies May Slow Up the Dictators

By MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
ROME—Andre Maurois, French Academician, once wrote a book which made a hit with the English—"The Silence of Colonel Bramble." But right now it is the strange silence of Duce Benito Mussolini which are intriguing the people of Europe.

It was announced that, at the conclusion of a meeting of the Fascist Grand Council in Rome, the Duce would make an important speech. His silence was 24 carat gold.

Later, at two or three other functions, the report was widespread that the Duce would deliver a speech which would make Europe sit up and take notice. Nothing happened.

British Press Hopes
This oratorical self-denial, this swallowing of words unuttered, has given rise to a lot of wishful thinking in a certain part of the weekly London press. They write as if the Duce and Hitler were almost on the outs. They talk about the Duce being in a fury.

The hit is that Hitler is not keen about Mussolini's demands upon France for Djibouti, the seaport of French Somaliland in East Africa, and for the French protectorate of Tunis in North Africa.

One very immediate cause for Mussolini's unwillingness to disturb the world in the last days of February and first days of March has been the death of Pope Pius XI, necessitating the election of a new head of the Roman Catholic Church. The Duce is a keen barometer when it comes to the feelings of the Italian people. He knows the overwhelming majority are loyal and faithful to the church. So he also knew, with the Church in mourning, that it would be a very bad time to start upsetting Europe with the fear of a possible war.

Whatever joint pressure Mussolini and Hitler may have concerted to bring upon France and Britain, there is pretty apt to be a respite until the end of March.

By that time Pope Pius XII will have taken full hold of his great office and will probably have presided at some great religious ceremonies. A British mission to discuss ways and means of avoiding a clash for markets between Germany and Britain will also have about completed its visit to Germany.

However, March 26, which marks the 20th anniversary of Fascism, will give the Duce another opportunity to break his silence.

U. S. Provides An Obstacle
Within the past few weeks a new element has also entered to disturb the calculations of the dictators—Roosevelt and Congress.

The proposed sale of large numbers of airplanes to France and England, the huge defense bill already passed by an overwhelming majority

Reichsfuehrer Proclaims Czech Protectorate, With Home Rule

WITH THE HUNGARIAN ARMY, in Carpatho-Ukraine—(AP)—Hungary's army of occupation Thursday encountered bitter resistance from Czech and Ukrainian Nationalist forces determined to make a last-ditch stand against annexation of the mountainous Carpatho-Ukraine.

The defending forces were entrenched seven miles west of Chust, regional capital, where Czech and Ukrainian fighters stubbornly met an Hungarian charge after a brief artillery bombardment. Snipers, pledged to die defending their rugged country, harassed every movement of the invaders.

An Hungarian officer said before noon that 100 Hungarians had been killed or wounded in the battle. Shortly before noon the Hungarian troops, advancing to carry out the annexation, encountered trenches and barbed-wire "entanglements," which were being defended by Czech and Ukrainian forces.

BUCHAREST, Rumania — (AP) — Premier Augustin Volosin of Carpatho-Ukraine Thursday fled into Rumania ahead of Hungary's advancing armies which are taking over the easternmost section of former Czechoslovakia.

Rumanians said Volosin, who had not heard of Hungary's formal annexation of Carpatho-Ukraine—announced in the Budapest parliament Thursday—considered his situation hopeless in Chust, the Carpatho-Ukraine capital.

Volosin quit the mountainous district after Hungary had rejected a conciliatory reply to an ultimatum demanding complete surrender Wednesday night.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — (AP) — Adolf Hitler Thursday laid down the German law for Bohemia-Moravia. Thus, 14,600 square miles and 2,450,000 more the population of central Europe became German-ruled.

It's Nice to Get Back to Shadow-Boxing

After all the grim and grisly realities that plague the world these days, it is nice to get back to a nice, pleasant little shadow-boxing contest about something that doesn't make any difference.

In fact, it is a good omen to see those old, old questions resurrected—Do Americans speak English? And, what are those Americans doing to the King's English?

Just because, for a change, it isn't of the slightest importance, let's take up the complaint of S. F. Marham, a member of the House of Commons, that American slang is debauching the tongue of Shakespeare and Milton.

Marham views with unmitigated horror the prospect that on some future and perilous day "the First Commissioner of Works, in his zeal for bringing the House up to date, will label the "Aye" Lobby the "Sez You" Lobby, and the other "Include Me Out" Lobby.

Whichever the "First Commissioner of Works" may be, he might do worse. The innovation might serve to stir a little spice into a legislative procedure which, if our own is any criterion, probably lacks some thing of being at all times breathlessly inspiring.

Marham has already been well answered by Stephen Leacock, the Canadian economist-humorist, who admits that he himself speaks "Ontario English." Leacock makes clear that slang is nothing to worry about, so far as the future of the English language is concerned, for time shows that only those slang phrases and words which have actually merit tend to survive. And if they make a genuine addition to the language, as tested by time, they can only make the language better.

Marham shows himself, however, how difficult it is going to be to keep some Americans from nailing down a permanent place for themselves in the English of the future.

Many, he laments, find it difficult to learn to say "sausage sandwich" instead of "hot dog." Ghosts of Gower! If these are anonymous, then words have indeed lost their meanings!

Imagine siding up to a British luncheon and asking for a sausage sandwich. You might receive two slices of bread with a few cold slices of bawmawurst laid to rest between them.

This culinary sacrilege would make Shakespeare himself yearn for the precision and the associations of the good old American word, "hot dog!"

Difference in Blood Groups No Bar to Having Children

Many extraordinary letters come to all of those who write regularly for the newspapers. Often we wonder just how many readers gather the full importance of the advice that is regularly offered. Here for example is a letter that just came to this column:

Dear Doctor: Can a husband and wife have children under these conditions: Wife's blood is three, husband's blood is four. Do they both have to match or does the matching of the blood have anything to do with having children?

Now the only figures relating to the blood that might apply to this question are those having to do with agglutination of the blood corpuscles and those concerned with the Wassermann test.

In the case of the Wassermann test, which is the basic test for syphilis, the figures would probably have been given as three plus and four plus.

While people with either three plus or four plus Wassermann tests could have children, they ought not to have any until every possible attempt had been made to cure the syphilis.

Children born of syphilitic parents are likely to show the results of such infection. In many instances the presence of such infection, not controlled by proper treatment, would probably result in loss of the child before the natural time of birth.

As I have frequently explained in these columns, each of us may be classified into various groups, according to the reaction of our red blood cells to the serum or fluid matter of the blood of other persons. With various classifications there are various numbers of groups. While these groups or classifications may be inherited to some extent, they are not apparently related to fertility or sterility.

Thus people of various classifications may marry and give birth to children. It is possible, however, by the use of these classifications, to determine under some circumstances the paternity of a child. The groups are also important in relationship to the transfusion of blood.

Obviously one could not transfuse the blood of one person into the veins of another if the blood corpuscles of one would be agglutinated or clumped together by the fluid material of the blood of the other.

I heard a valiant cardinal
Dark red against the early dawn,
He whistled from a leafless tree
Upon a barren lawn.
The tiny dauntless splotch of red Shot up a challenge straight and high;
A rocket-burst of silver stars
To shower a cloudless sky.
The little brave intrepid thing,
A conqueror of cold and night,
He drenched the bare boughs suddenly
With color and with light.
A triumph and a victory
That I have come to understand,
I laughed a broken laugh, and took Life once more by the hand.

perintendent of schools of Atlanta,

Mrs. P. E. Logan and Mrs. S. C. Loin the city.

The Bay View Reading club held its regular meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. G. Alnie Guest as joint hostess. The Atlantic City, N. J. with O. Ioffa, Atlantic City, N. J. as joint hostess. The club home had an added beauty in bowls and vases of lovely red bud, so prevalent in our city at this time,

and one of spring's loveliness harbingers.
The meeting was opened by Mrs. T. R.
Billingsley, who called attention to the lecture given at the First Methodist church Friday afternoon and urged a full attendance of the club. Mrs. V.
A. Hammonds read the minutes of the previous meeting and called the roll, with most interesting and instructive responses from the unusually large membership. Mrs. John S. Gibson introduced the program study,
"Caves and Caverns of the United States" with a very interesting and clever description of the first cave she ever saw, it being the handiwork of some of the earlier pioneers of Hope, when they were boys in high school, and libraries were filled with "Diamond Dick" stories. Mrs. W. R.
Hamilton gave a history and descrip-followed by Mrs. Hugh Jones who told most vividly of the Carlsbad Caverns of New Mexico, telling of the development of this beautiful wonder, dwelling on the character of Jim White, the cowboy discoverer. Mrs.

Hamilton read a most interesting description of Mammoth Cave of Kentucky, written by Mrs. Hugh Smith.
Other caves mentioned were the Diamond Cave of Arkansas and the Cave of the Winds in Colorado. Mrs.
Edwin Ward and Mrs. Don Smith were guests. Following the program, the hostesses served a most tempting gone to fulfill the idea of a Greater Germany. Prague's residents, without fear and contrary to repeated appeals made by loudspeakers set up in the capital's principal streets, loudly hisssed and booed the troops. They threw some snow balls at armored cars.

A platoon of Czech police kept the crowds in St. Wenceslas Square from springing at three armored cars and their embarrassed operators. World war legionnaires who fought for Czech independence under the leadership of the late Thomas Masaryk and his aide, Eduard Benes, wept without shame,
and so did their women.
Cries of "Full! Full!—go back home!" were heard.
German residents, however, provided some cheering for the conquerors.
The Czechs did not know exactly what sort of government they were to have. Bohemia was placed under military rule of Gen. Johannes Blas-kowitz, commander of Group Three of the German army, and General Blaskowitz appointed Konrad Hen-lein, the Sudeten Nazi leader, to be chief of Bohemia's civil administration.
Moravia's executive power was placed in the hands of Gen. Wilhelm ravian civil administration was vest-missioner in Austria.

27th Anniversary of the Girl Scouts

Leaders and 5 Troops to Meet Sunday at Presbyterian Church

The girl scouts throughout the nation are celebrating the 27th birthday of the organization this week. The girl scout idea was started by Juliette Low in Savannah, Ga., March 12, 1912. Since then girl scouting has reached more than two million girls. This year the figures are the highest for any single year with a membership of 519,000 girls.
One hundred of these girls live in Hope.
The most noticeable growth in the national organization has been in the senior group among the fourteen to eighteen year girls. This is due to the revised program.
Hope has made splendid progress the last year. Ground was broken on March 17 for the "Little House" which was completed in November. The local council was chartered in May. Since then a Brownie Pack and a fifth troop have been organized.
The girls of the 5 troops and the Brownie pack will meet with their

NATIONWIDE RADIO PROGRAM BUILDS QUALITY EGG MARKET

Egg Cartons Furnished Layena-Fed Flocks

A new national radio program designed to make the American public more quality egg conscious and to increase the demand for high quality eggs was inaugurated recently over a network of 85 stations. Sponsored by Purina Mills, the new fifteen-minute broadcast is scheduled every Monday, Wednesday and Friday throughout the winter months.

By dramatic appeal and convincing demonstration the "Checkerboard Time" broadcasts are featuring the more appetizing appearance, superior flavor, and high food value of eggs that come from flocks fed and managed to produce uniformly better eggs.

Better Market—Better Prices
Of special interest to egg producers is the promotional value of the "Checkerboard Time" programs in helping to build a greater demand for eggs of superior quality, for which people are willing to pay better prices. Of exceptional interest, too, is the new egg marketing program that is being made available to all poultry raisers who follow Purina's program for producing quality eggs with Layena laying mash.

Egg Cartons Furnished
With every bag of Layena laying mash flock owners are receiving up to twenty Checkerboard egg cartons. These are enough cartons to pack the eggs built into every bag of Layena. All Purina dealers have a supply of these Checkerboard cartons and have available rubber stamps to imprint the producer's name on them.

Remodeling the House

In remodeling the home to make it more attractive one of the first considerations is the floors. The floor is the structural base of a room according to Miss Sybil D. Bates, extension specialist in home industries, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

Since the floor is the foundation from which the walls rise and the base of which the furniture rests, it create a floor that is appropriate in texture, color, and finish, Miss Bates says.

The use to which floors will be put determines how it should be finished. A floor that is much used should be finished with materials of extra wearing qualities. Two coats of water proof paint or varnish will help preserve the wood.

The condition of the floor need not baffle one who is interested in transforming it into something different. The process of rejuvenating an old floor requires the expenditure of much energy and time. Dry, warm weather is the best for doing varnish and paint work.

It is not an economy to buy cheap paint or varnish. They do not go as far as long. Good brushes save time. Varnish and paint should be thoroughly stirred before using.

All grease and grit must be removed from the floor before applying the finish. It is always best to remove all old varnish or paint before starting new work. The highest grade of varnish will be no better than the left under it.

Remove the old finish if possible. Spots under the finish can be removed with a bleach made from oxalic acid crystals dissolved in water. It is heated, applied to the spots, and left to dry. After the floor has dried, rinse with clear hot water. The floor must be thoroughly dry before any finish is applied.

Any kind of finish may be used. The floor may be stained the desired color and waxed. It may be varnished or painted. Water proof varnish is impervious to both hot and cold water. Two or three coats of varnish, each allowed to dry thoroughly before another coat is applied, make a serviceable floor and one easily cleaned.

Screens for Home

Adequate screening will be first on the list of home improvements for 1939 in the rural homes of Hempstead county. It is estimated that 90 per cent of the homes in the county need screens.

Some kind of screening can be installed for very little cost, according to Mrs. Lida A. Fenton, extension specialist in home management, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. Netting tacked over the window frames is possibly the cheapest temporary solution of this need. A just able half-screens are not expensive, and if there is a boy or a man in the family who can make frames to fit the lower sashes and tack screen wire on them, the cost would be still less. Screen doors are just as important and in regular stock sizes, which can often be trimmed to fit, are relatively cheap. They should have springs to close them automatically.

Ideal screens are full length for all windows, so that either shutters may be opened, and ventilation is better, the specialist said.

Why are screens so important? Any entomologist or public-health worker explains that the fly carries disease germs and filth to our food. Two or three flies in the house soon breed others. Screens having a mesh of 16 strands to the inch are satisfactory for excluding flies and the smaller mosquitoes. In mild regions, especially near the seacoast, bronze wire is undoubtedly the least expensive in the long run. In dry climates black or painted screen wire will last fairly well and give satisfaction. In moderately moist climates, the best grade of galvanized wire is better, Mrs. Fenton said.

State Has Issued Quota of Trick Licenses

BALTIMORE, Md.—About 8,000 Marylanders who had hoped to grace their cars with special license numbers during the April '38-'39 period had to take what came their way. They were issued "before we run out." Commissioner of Vehicles Walter R. Rudy explained. Those consisted of combinations like 66-777, or those ending in double-0 and triple-0. Such numbers were picked out of the lots as shipments came in.

Rudy said it would have taken too much work to fish out a plain number like 21-794.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—(AP)—Judge John R. McNelis gave Cecil Shock a novel way to settle the speeding charge against him.

DELMAR, Md.—It's a better than fair bet that a birthday for any one of the three Long boys—George of Delmar, William of Salisbury, and Curtis of New York—doesn't go by unnoticed.

Curtis in 1914.

And the brothers shouldn't forget the birth date of their sister, Mrs. Lewis Melson of Delmar—born on the fourth of July.

Paul Harrison in Hollywood

Hollywood Has Been the Making of Many Potentially "Bad" Boys

HOLLYWOOD.—Some problem boys wind up in prison cells and some wind up in Hollywood mansions. It seems to be partly a matter of luck and of wise direction of their peculiar energies.

This may be an old story to settlement workers who are offering more and more dramatics to underprivileged youngsters with streaks of exhibitionism. But I hadn't thought much about it until, at lunch in Warner's Green Room, a writer invited me to look around at the actors present and recall how many of them, as kids, were rebels and roamers and hell-raisers. There was John Garfield, for one, a tough mug who has become a picture star within a year. He hasn't taken anybody into confidential detail about his early poverty-stricken life in New York, but he has admitted that the Angelo Patri school was about all that saved him from "education" in a reformatory.

And there was Errol Flynn, a runaway and a juvenile ne'er-do-well who went after adventure and found it. He also acquired more polish than most rolling stones. Some of the authorities of New Guinea, Australia and way points earnestly wished that he had remained on the other side of the equator. One day he happened to meet a producer of a South Seas picture and Flynn found that make-believe was almost as exciting as the real thing, and a lot more profitable.

He Wouldn't Fiddle

Muni Weisenfreund wasn't bad; he just didn't like playing a fiddle. His theatrical family were determined that he should become a great violinist. He wouldn't practice, so they'd lock him in his room for hours at a time until he sawed through his lesson.

One day he found a jug of apple brandy in a closet and got tight as a tick. When his parents finally unlocked the door they found him sprawled among the fragments of a shattered violin. "He will come to a bad end, that boy," wailed Papa Weisenfreund. So the boy ran away and became Paul Muni.

Wayne Morris was something less than a model youngster. As soon as he was old enough he skipped his bed and board and shipped on a steamer for Australia.

Another time he left home and worked in the fruit fields of the northwest. His family finally despaired of keeping him in school and reluctantly allowed him to join the Pasadena Community Players. And there he was seen by a movie talent scout.

Other Tough Guys

George Brent spent years getting in and out of real trouble in Ireland. The University of Dublin kicked him out for fighting with an instructor. Then he became a dispatch runner for Michael Collins until Collins was killed. Brent escaped and became an actor in New York.

Some other tough guys of Manhattan were George Raft, Jimmy Cagney

Washington

Mr. and Mrs. Will Parsons of Louisiana were visiting Washington relatives Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Baber of Hot Springs announce the arrival Monday morning, March 13, of an eight and one-half pound boy. Mrs. Baber is the former Miss Hazel Parsons of Washington, and the couple moved to Hot Springs about a year ago from Washington Route 1. Both mother and baby were reported as doing well Tuesday.

Mrs. John James and little daughter, Martha, of Hope, were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Levins and family.

Mrs. M. C. Parsons was a Hope visitor last Friday.

Miss Lucille Hulsey, of Hope, spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. A. F. Simmons and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schooley of Hope were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Ward, Mrs. Schooley's parents.

Mrs. R. L. Levins and daughter, Bettie Sue, were, Hope visitors Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Trimble of El Dorado spent Saturday and Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. W. H. Etter, and granddaughter, Sarah June, who were ill last week with influenza.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Watkins of El Dorado were the guests of Mrs. Emily Watkins during the week end. The Presbyterian auxiliary met Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. A. Wilson. Because of the illness of a number of the members, only five were present. The lesson was handled as a roundtable discussion. Meeting for next week will be at the home of Mrs. Sallie K. Holt, who will conduct the Bible study.

Miss Nancy Clark spent the week end with relatives in Arkadelphia and Pine Bluff.

Miss Kathryn Holt of the Texarkana High School faculty spent the week end with homefolks.

Lee Holt of Rodessa, La., spent part of the day Sunday with his family here.

Mrs. F. M. Williams of Texarkana was the guest Sunday afternoon of and Humphrey Bogart. The latter was a problem boy of prosperous parents and got into numerous scrapes before he came stage manager for William A. Brady. Brady fired him, but he stayed around the stage and became an actor.

Cagney worked hard and fought hard to get out of his slum environment, but Raft was more of an opportunist. There's no telling what would have happened to the lacquer-haired lad if he hadn't learned to dance.

When Claude Rains admitted to his father that he wanted to become an actor he was told, "You end up a fool or a rascal."

Recently all Hollywood paid tribute to W. C. Fields on the anniversary of his fortieth year in show business, and banquet speakers burred about his contributions to a happier world. This is the same Claude Dunkelfield who as a hot-headed kid at 13 conked his father with a box and skipped out of his home forever.

SERIAL STORY

'MRS. DOC'

BY TOM HORNER

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

The characters and situations in this story are wholly fictional.

Yesterday, Eric took Emily to a party when Alan is called on an emergency case. As Alan leaves he drops a letter. It is from St. Louis and Dr. Peterson. It is four days old!

CHAPTER VIII

THE letter burned Emily's fingers, seared her heart. Mixed emotions of anger, of disappointment surged through her, leaving her trembling. She fought down an impulse to scream, strove valiantly to keep back her tears.

Without a word she turned, placed the letter on the mantel, resting it against Alan's pipe rack so that he would be sure to see it. Then she faced Eric.

"That's all he thinks of the greatest opportunity he'll ever have," she said bitterly. "He doesn't even read it!"

"Don't be too harsh," Eric said. "He's been busy, night and day. He probably stuck it in his pocket hurriedly and forgot all about it. He—"

"Don't try to defend him. There's no excuse for absolutely ignoring an offer of a job that will pay him twice as much as he earns here. It's just that he doesn't care. He doesn't care about his future, he doesn't care about me!"

"Now, now, Emily," Eric's tone was soft and soothing. "I'm sure as soon as Alan has a little more time, he'll consider the offer, probably accept it, if it would make you happy."

"Oh, no he won't. He's perfectly content to stay right here in Sumner, being just a country doctor. It doesn't matter to him that I have to go to parties alone, sit here at home alone for days and nights, never seeing anyone, never knowing anyone, never doing anything but answering that telephone and sending him away from me."

"I don't matter. I'm just his wife," Emily's chin was quivering. "The only thing he ever thinks about are his precious patients. I hate every one of them. I hate Sumner. Sometimes—Oh, Eric!"

She could keep back the tears no longer. Sobs shook her. Eric's arms were around her and she was crying, her face pressed into the yielding blackness of his coat.

"There, there," he said. He stared over the soft curls that crowned her head into the dancing flames. He wondered if she could feel his heart pounding, if she could sense the electrifying thrill the greatness of her sent coursing through him. Gently, as if consoling a child who had bruised a finger, he talked, until the sobs grew fainter and fainter. At last she raised her face to him. Her lips were close to his. Tears shone in her eyes. There was an instant of tense silence, then—

"You're a darling, Eric, and I'm just a spoiled brat, and I—I need a handkerchief!"

"ERIC, if you insist on giving away tricks, Dr. Farrell and I just have to beat you." Alan's laugh was hearty as he added up the score. The four—Emily, Alan, Eric, and Dr. Farrell—were seated at the bridge table, the night after the Maddox dinner party.

"Eric's not keeping his mind on the cards tonight," Dr. Farrell broke in. "What's wrong, son? Worried?"

"Frankly, yes, Dr. Farrell," Eric answered. "About the weather." "What's wrong with the weather? Forecast says warmer," Dr. Farrell replied. "After this snow, a little warm weather should be welcome."

"It probably is, to everyone but me," Eric said. "Personally, I'd like to have it stay cold for a while longer." He noted the unasked question in their eyes and went on to explain.

"It's about the dam. We had a heavy snowfall here, but farther north it was a record breaker for this time of year. Now, if we get rain and warm weather, all of this snow will run off, rather than soak into the ground, as it would do if the thaw was gradual."

"And what has all this to do with your dam?" Emily asked. "It may make, or break it," Eric said simply. "You see, we built a diversion dam about a half mile upstream before we started work on the main dam. This diversion dam is little more than a pile of rock and earth. Right now it is backing water a mile upstream. It's taking about all the pressure it can stand, and if the river starts to rise, it may go out."

"If it does, and all that flood comes pounding down the gorge, the new dam may go out too. We've got crews working day and night—24 hours a day—pouring gravel into that diversion dam, sandbagging the top; we're doing everything we can to save it. Every available man in the county has been put to work. If the thaw will hold off for 10 days more, we'll make it."

"Summer and the lowlands are in no particular danger, right now," he added, noting Emily's alarmed expression. "The river, below the dam, is low, and can carry a good-sized flood without much trouble. Some of that low country right around the dam might get a few feet of water, but no one lives in there, so there's little danger. We anticipated that."

"But you didn't anticipate a flood?" Farrell asked.

"We thought we had," Eric said. "We checked data on the river for years back and built accordingly—but we had no idea that there might be such a blizzard in March, or that it might be followed by rains and warm weather. Not in 50 years of weather records did we find anything that parallels it."

"But don't let me bother you with my troubles—you have enough of your own. And anyway, we're going to beat this river, snow or no snow, thaw or no thaw. We'll have that diversion dam sound enough to take 10 times all the water this snow can give us. All we need is a little time—and a little more cold weather."

ALONE in his hotel room, Eric Kane gazed at his reflection in the mirror and cursed it, softly but fervently.

"You can't even play bridge with her. She bids hearts—you do a flip flop. She plays a diamond, and you stare at the one on her finger. You fool!"

He stretched full length on the bed, stared at the ceiling. He could close his eyes and see her face. That funny little grin that started at the corners of her mouth, then spread over her lips. Her lips—lovely, perfect, kissable.

The way she included him in her retinue—Alan, Farrell, and him. Her slaves. The way she wrinkled her nose. The way—The telephone bell jangled him out of his reverie. It was Baker, his assistant engineer, calling from the dam.

"Yes. Got more gravel on the track, should be there by morning. Well, damn it, man, keep them doing something. You've got 10,000 sacks up there. Fill 'em up. Throw them over on the far side where the water will hit first."

"How's that trestle holding? Keep those gravel trucks rolling over it. Get men with shovels in there. Don't let that stone pile up on it. I'll never hold it. Pull all the men off the concrete and steel and put them in there too. I'll be up first thing in the morning. Okay. Hell, you can sleep tomorrow. G'night."

He undressed slowly, crawled into bed. The dam was enough of a worry without adding Emily. Why should he be worrying about Emily Warren, she was another man's wife!

"You're a fool, Eric Kane," he told himself. "That was all over years ago. But was it?"

"You're crazy, all right. And you're in love with Emily Warren!"

Fishing Rescue of Fair Mermaid

Hauled onto a boat, this was frigid fish to ambitions of Zorima, one of Golden Gate Exposition's "natural" attractions, who failed in attempt to swim from San Francisco to Treasure Island in icy waters of the bay.

when you waited a day to speak to Anna. I wonder of you would do it with me?"

Mrs. Jones was very surprised. It had never occurred to her that a child would react precisely the same to correction as a stranger. "Why, darling, maybe you are right. I never thought about it."

We cannot always wait until the next day, that is sure, when children need instant correcting and even punishment. But it is true, also, that a postponed suggestion, made when the child is less nervous, often gets better results.

When he has broken a rule, his own conscience sats up a quick de-tense. This is another angle to it. At such a time he is almost beyond reach. He is ready with excuses and too anxious to save face. Later, a good talk on the subject will find him more receptive. There is a psychological moment after all. (Copyright, 1939, NEA Service, Inc.)

RAISING A FAMILY

Discipline Child When No One Else Is Around

Anna brought in the desert before she had cleared all the things from the table. Mrs. Jones did not say anything at the time, but spoke quietly: "I shall tell her tomorrow."

"Why don't you tell her now?" said Jane. "She will forget."

"No," remarked Mrs. Jones. "I find it best not to correct a mistake when there are other people around. She will take it better if I speak to her alone."

Another time Anna put too much pepper in the soup. This time it was Mr. Jones who complained. "Sh," said his wife, "be careful. I can talk to her about it tomorrow better. Then she will be less nervous. I'll use tact. I'll say: 'By the way Anna, that was very good chowder, but it seems a shame to spoil the flavor by too much seasoning. We are not as fond of hot soups as some people. So, if you will remember, I am sure we shall enjoy our meals more.'"

There were several occasions of this kind. Anna was more than willing to learn, but she was very fearful about trying new recipes. When Mrs. Jones waited to tell her nicely about trying new recipes. When under a strain, she did not feel that she had failed. And she remembered very well, indeed.

This article is not about Anna. It is really about Jane Jones, who was beginning to feel grownup and very sensitive about her blunders.

Her mother corrected her one day before some relatives. Another time she told Jane not to interrupt when
